Rosa – Summer Beauty on a wet, English Lawn.

Robert Clark

A Tea Rose with coral-peach flowers
She wears her pastel shades
The wisps of her hemline - like petals
Reveal her young stems to be a chocolate gold

Coming to fruition in these summer months
Blossoming in conversation
I'm reminded of her light scent and all her modesty,
Now the centrepiece of another's boutonnière.

Grasped from recounting past summer nights
By the clink of ice in my G & T
A regrettable lament
To times when it was all Strawberries and cream

Interrupted by the dulling hum
Heavy with our years of insurmountable resentment
She finally comes to rest with me,
My own darling Bumblebee.
